FROM THE CHAIR

History plays many important roles in today's world. It allows us to see how past decisions, people and events set the stage for current events. It reminds us how our memories are entwined with the memories of others. History shows us when to celebrate achievement and where to rectify past wrongs.

Everyone deserves to know his or her history. But what happens to those Pennsylvanians whose stories have been lost, ignored or forgotten?

Throughout the commonwealth, professors, students and citizen historians are uncovering traces of individuals whose lives were not well documented. These "history detectives" are doing exciting work. They are identifying segregated cemeteries, excavating Native American sites and abandoned miners' villages, and uncovering the connections between descendants of enslaved African Americans and white farmers whose lives intersected on the Underground Railroad.

Commissioners and staff of the Pennsylvania Historical & Museum Commission are supporting, encouraging and implementing such efforts. Commissioner and acclaimed artist Ophelia Chambliss is a case in point. She is on a mission to "capture, look at, record, and tell the stories of people of color."

Chambliss told me about one of her research projects. In 1827, decades before the Civil War, 60 formerly enslaved people arrived in York County by wagon from Virginia to find new homes through the support of Quakers from both locations. Chambliss first heard about them in stories told by York area community members and wanted to learn more. That led her to the York County Historical Society for microfilmed newspaper articles, then membership rolls of veteran's organizations, and then cemetery records. She carefully pieced together the bits of evidence she found and then used them to bring the stories to light in colorful paintings and public murals.

Chambliss devotes countless hours to helping Commission staff identify opportunities to make our exceptional sites, archives, museums and other resources more available to underserved people. Because of her efforts and those of her Commission colleagues, Pennsylvania's historical record is becoming more accurate, more inclusive, and much, much richer.

FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Even though history applies the lens of perspective to events, I think it is fair to anticipate that this past year will be one that reverberates for a long time to come. As a country, we began the year with a discussion about the very founding of our nation and the fundamental principles of a just and equitable society. Who could have predicted that so many forces would converge to reshape so much of our way of life? It is hard to believe that in the year's last six months alone we experienced a pandemic, an economic downturn, civil unrest, and a long overdue conversation about the role race plays in America. Each of these on its own would be a significant challenge.

It is the mission of the Pennsylvania Historical & Museum Commission, as the state's history agency, to capture events of this year, look to the past to provide context for how we got here, and provide information and interpretation to inform citizens and decision-makers in the choices they face.

As an agency we began the year marking the 400th anniversary of the arrival of enslaved Africans in America, highlighting both the achievements of Black Pennsylvanians and the challenges they have faced. We celebrated the 100th anniversary of women's suffrage with exhibits and events.

With the pandemic, some of our in-person services like exhibits and programs have migrated to an online format. Other existing services—digital access to documents and collections, project review, outreach, and webinars—have been increased. We initially launched our online museum collections database in January, and our staff has been hard at work inputting records to make these collections held at our sites and museums available to the public. The Pennsylvania State Archives has continued to increase its digitized records and to enhance the searchability of its existing records. Our State Historic Preservation Office digitized all of its records, importing them into an online data management system that will be launched in early 2021.

Pennsylvania has a rich history made up of diverse voices and experiences, and we are committed to reflecting that broad narrative in all that we do. This year we initiated proactive measures to identify communities and stories that are underrepresented in our narrative, searching out important history to document and share. We have added depth to the Pennsylvania history we hold through new exhibits, National Register listings, historical markers, digital media, partnerships, collections and programming.

All Pennsylvanians remain at the heart of everything we do. Our work with communities, organizations and individuals across the commonwealth is key to ensuring that our history reflects our diversity as a state. Providing access to the historical record, whether through documents, records or collections, is vital to helping Pennsylvanians find their history and use it in ways that are meaningful to them.

Pennsylvania State Archives

The Pennsylvania State Archives (PSA) protects more than 250 million significant historic, legal and financial documents for use by state agencies and the public. These documents range from William Penn's Charter of 1681 to the digital media of recent governors and vital records such as historic birth and death certificates. PSA makes these documents available to the public—researchers, genealogists, scholars—both in person and online. PSA also operates the State Records Center, a cost-effective storage facility for the records of state agencies, and it trains state agencies and local governments to safeguard and manage records. In 2019–20 PSA served more than 4.5 million visitors in person and online.

HARC Grants Make Invaluable Historic Records Available to the Public

Rosina Heydrich, a member of the Schwenkfelder community who lived in Lower Salford, Montgomery County, was a midwife who kept a manuscript of her work between 1770 and 1819. Written in German, the document records 1,739 births she attended in the Perkiomen Valley, includes a section of medical treatments and herbal remedies for women and children, and even touches on the devastating yellow fever epidemic of 1793. The manuscript from the collection of the Schwenkfelder Library & Heritage Center in Pennsburg is now a widely distributed source of information for researchers, genealogists, and students of medical history, women's studies and folklife. Thanks to support through a Historical & Archival Records Care (HARC) Grant, the document was translated by Pennsylvania Dutch studies scholar Patrick J. Donmoyer and made available online this year. HARC Grants, funded by PHMC and managed by PSA, are designed to improve the preservation of historical records significant to Pennsylvania and are available to selected organizations for collections care—including surveying, inventorying, preserving, arranging and describing—and for records reformatting and equipment.

Digitization/Conservation Leads to Greater Accessibility of Visual Collections

PSA's ongoing strategy to digitize its collections for convenient access by patrons continued this year and included imaging of photographic and motion picture media. Approximately 23,000 nitrate negatives and 320 films have been stored through the years in PSA's walk-in freezer to halt deterioration and stabilize flammable nitrate. Following a complete inventory of these materials and an assessment to determine which items are most crucial in terms of both restoration needs and accessibility to researchers, the conservation and digitization stage of the project began this year. The first negatives digitized and duplicated on stable polyester sheet film were 2,136 Aero Service Corp. photographs, circa 1926–48, one of the earliest aerial surveys in the country. The digitization of the motion pictures, which are from a variety of commonwealth agencies, was nearly completed by the end of the fiscal year. In addition to access through PSA, many of these materials will be made available in the coming months through Power Library. By the end of the fiscal year, PSA's total images online amounted to 16,907,000.

PHMC Marks 150th Anniversary of the 15th Amendment at Charter Day

The 15th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, ensuring the right of American men to vote, regardless of “race, color, or previous condition of servitude,” was adopted on March 30, 1870, and stands as a significant moment in the movement toward greater equality in America. To mark the 150th anniversary of the amendment, the Pennsylvania State Archives exhibited two rarely seen original documents from its collection during the annual Charter Day event at The State Museum of Pennsylvania on Sunday, March 8, 2020: Pennsylvania’s 1780 Act for the Gradual Abolition of Slavery and the state’s 1869 Joint Resolution to Ratify the 15th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. These key civil rights documents were displayed with William Penn’s original Charter of 1681, which established Pennsylvania as a haven of religious toleration and personal freedom. More than 800 visitors attended the event to view the documents.

The State Museum of Pennsylvania

The State Museum of Pennsylvania is responsible for maintaining a collection of more than 9 million artifacts that tell the stories of Pennsylvania's natural and cultural history. These are the largest collections in the commonwealth focused exclusively on the heritage of Pennsylvania, covering the fields of art, history, archaeology, geology, paleontology and natural history. Listed in the National Register of Historic Places, The State Museum building boasts nearly 160,000 square feet of exhibit space filled with both permanent and changing exhibits. In a typical year, 40,000 school students visit the museum, with another 60,000 adult and group visitors participating in the museum's educational and facility use programs.

Violet Oakley Studies Featured in Exhibition Marking 19th Amendment Centennial

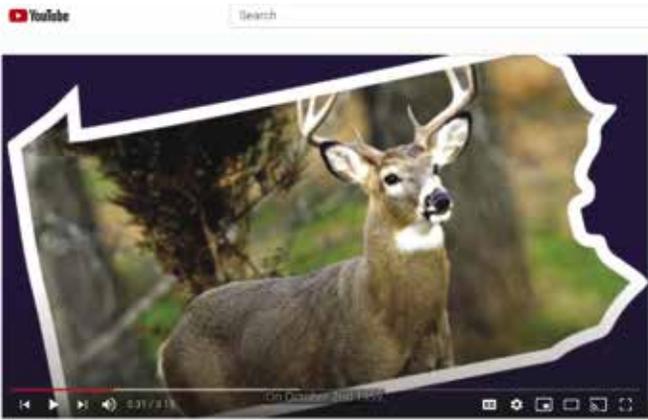

Artist Violet Oakley embodied the ideal of the “New Woman,” embraced by feminists of her era who fearlessly pushed past the limits society imposed on them because of their gender. She became the first woman in America to receive a government mural commission, and from 1902 to 1927 she painted 43 murals for the Pennsylvania State Capitol. The nine panels she created for the Senate Chamber between 1911 and 1919 are impressive in scale and scope. Featuring people and events from Pennsylvania history, the panels depict topics rarely seen in American public art of that era. African Americans are depicted in four of the nine murals, and women appear with unusual frequency, often as allegorical or historical figures. In recognition of the 100th anniversary of the 19th Amendment, guaranteeing women the right to vote, The State Museum mounted Picturing a More Perfect Union: Violet Oakley’s Mural Studies for the Pennsylvania Senate Chamber, a special exhibition highlighting more than 50 of Oakley’s original studies for the murals from the museum’s collection. The exhibit, which opened on November 22, 2019, presented Oakley’s process, using her studies to illustrate the many layers that went into making each mural.

Art of the State Sustains a Cultural Tradition of Celebrating Artistic Achievement in PA

Noted for its commitment to the arts in the commonwealth, The State Museum presented the 52nd year of its annual juried art exhibition, Art of the State, which opened on June 23, 2019. One hundred and ten works by 103 artists from 35 counties across the commonwealth were showcased. Artists received awards for painting, photography, craft, sculpture and work on paper, and the museum chose two Purchase Awards for its collection. Since 1968 the museum has served as the venue for Pennsylvania artists to share their ideas and engage viewers through a diverse body of artwork. A number of associated events have become part of the program, including the three-part Artist Conversations series, in which the award winners or art experts discuss the works during a tour with curators. This was the fourth year in which First Lady and artist Frances Wolf conducted a tour of the exhibit.

Museum Programs Continue Education Online During the Pandemic

The State Museum staff met the challenge of working from home starting in March 2020 due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Several regular programs were migrated online to continue reaching audiences and connecting them to Pennsylvania's history and natural history. Links were grouped on a virtual learning landing page connecting to such resources as educational videos produced each week for children under Curiosity Kids and Explore! Wednesdays in Nature Lab and a program of video chats for adults called State Museum Perspectives with staff curators, educators, designers and community partners discussing exhibits and collections. Museum curators focused on adding historic artifacts, archaeological objects and natural history specimens to PHMC's online collections database, which debuted on December 31, 2019, making collections globally accessible.

Museum Archaeology Section Shares Discoveries on Native American Cultures in PA

The State Museum's archaeology collections contain more than 7.5 million objects documenting the history and prehistory of Pennsylvania. The museum's Section of Archaeology manages and curates these collections and conducts its own excavations, including an annual autumn dig at Fort Hunter, a site in Harrisburg that served as a fortification during the French and Indian War. The section also educates the public about the role of archaeology in preserving the commonwealth's heritage through such programs as the annual Workshops in Archaeology. The subject of this year's event was the Monongahela, a Native American tribe that flourished in western Pennsylvania from approximately 1050 through their disappearance from the archaeological record around 1640. The program featured a panel of experts who discussed the social organization of the Late Woodland period, subsistence during this time, and potential reasons for the Monongahelas' demise. A flintknapping demonstration, an artifact authentication session, and a reception for discussion followed.

PHMC Highlights Agricultural History and Genealogy at Farm Show

The Pennsylvania Farm Show, held at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex on January 4–11, 2020, was once again a venue for PHMC to engage the public in its programs and highlight the relevance of the commonwealth's agricultural and natural heritage. The booth featured a new dynamic design with visuals emphasizing collections and included a touch-screen kiosk from The State Museum for visitors to search a visual database of T.M. Fowler's 1885–1905 bird's-eye views of Pennsylvania cities and towns. The museum's Section of Archaeology highlighted Pennsylvania's Native American heritage, showcasing a dugout canoe replica and other artifacts, and the Section of Zoology/Botany featured specimens of the state's wildlife. The Pennsylvania State Archives, with support from Ancestry.com, provided free access for genealogical searches. An estimated 33,000 visitors were drawn to the booth this year.

Bureau of Historic Sites and Museums

The Bureau of Historic Sites and Museums (BHSM) preserves and interprets 26 historic sites and museums across the commonwealth that together tell a comprehensive story of Pennsylvania. These sites include battlefields, historic houses and religious settlements, as well as theme museums focused on Pennsylvania's nationally significant role in key industries including lumber, coal, agriculture and railroads. Although rooted in history, these museums interpret themes in relevant and contemporary ways, hosting citizenship ceremonies, highlighting the state's traditions of immigration and tolerance, and celebrating the state's social, cultural and economic diversity.

Accessibility Excellence Launched to Provide Access to Marginalized Communities

Sharing the commonwealth's heritage of diversity and hospitality for those seeking a new life is one of the valuable lessons offered by PHMC to present and future generations. In September 2019 the Institute of Museum and Library Services announced that PA Museums had been awarded $163,500 for Accessibility Excellence, a project to design and implement a methodology and toolkit to improve accessibility for traditionally marginalized communities. PHMC partnered with PA Museums to develop the program, beginning work in January 2020. The Accessibility Excellence Working Group, consisting of staff from multiple PHMC sites and representing all areas of operations, was formed to work with project personnel from PA Museums staff and the Access Advisory Council. Work to develop the project's assessment tool and resource toolkit continued despite COVID-19 disruptions.

Signature Events Offer Valuable Historical Experiences

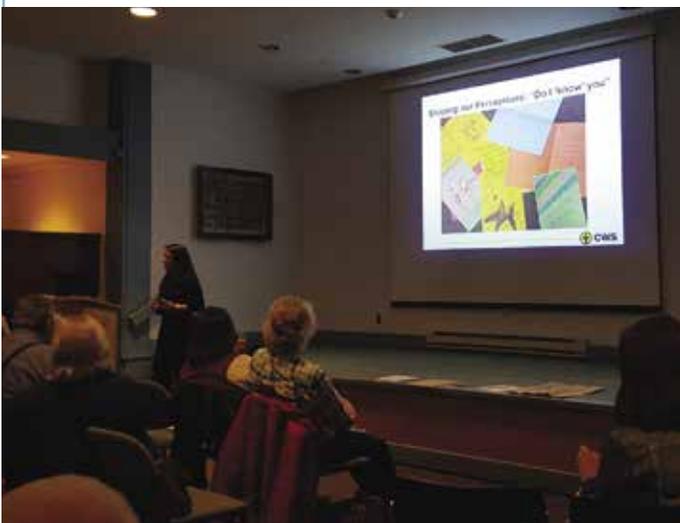

Somerset Historical Center in Somerset preserves a complex of structures and artifacts that mark the distinctive agrarian heritage of southwestern Pennsylvania. Each September the site is also the venue for Mountain Craft Days, a three-day outdoor festival featuring activities, music performances, food such as potpie and apple dumplings, and demonstrations from more than 100 artisans, all interpreting the crafts and folkways of the region with historical accuracy. In 2019 the event drew more than 13,000 visitors. Each year, PHMC sites and museums organize annual signature events that provide engaging, one-of-a-kind opportunities for Pennsylvanians and tourists to connect with the commonwealth's rich past. Beginning in March 2020, due to the COVID-19 pandemic, many special events had to be cancelled; however, staff continued to fulfill their mission to share Pennsylvania history through a variety of online programs.

Ephrata Cloister Presents Class on Refugees of Past and Present in PA

Refugees fleeing religious persecution in their native country is a story with deep roots in American history. William Penn created Pennsylvania as a haven for such people and many of the commonwealth's earliest settlers benefitted from his generosity. That story came full circle as the February 2020 offering in the Winter History Class at Historic Ephrata Cloister, the PHMC historic site that preserves the home of a unique 18th-century religious community that reflects a model of Penn's Holy Experiment. In the class, Jeff Bach, director of Elizabethtown College's Young Center for Anabaptist and Pietist Studies, recounted the travels of a group of 18th-century Germans persecuted for disregarding the state-supported church in their hometown of Gimbshheim; fleeing Europe, they came to Ephrata Cloister in 1751, many eventually settling in York County. Stephanie Gromek of Church World Service then discussed the experiences of refugees today, tracing their journey from camps in their own or neighboring countries to resettlement in Lancaster County and then examining issues such as housing, transportation, work, language and citizenship.

Pennsbury Manor Offers a Variety of Diversity Programs

Pennsbury Manor, the site of William Penn's country estate along the Delaware River near Morrisville, Bucks County, interprets the life and career of Pennsylvania's founder and the origins of the diverse commonwealth he established. Following this legacy, Pennsbury strives to ensure that its programs are serving and representing all Pennsylvanians.

- In November 2019 Pennsbury sponsored a visit to the site for 4th graders from the Title I Thomas Mifflin Elementary School, where funds for field trips are scarce. The students learned about early Pennsylvania history through hands-on activities and tours at the site.

- The Delaware Tribe of Indians has been working with Pennsbury to establish a burial ground there for human remains and funerary objects. In September 2019 the commonwealth passed a resolution on interment rights and, following PHMC archaeological testing, made an agreement with the Delaware to proceed with the reburial.

- Following closure of Pennsbury due to the pandemic, a planned Juneteenth program with the African American Museum of Bucks County was instead offered online via Zoom, featuring a history of the holiday, songs, a reading from the Emancipation Proclamation, and a first-person interpretation of an enslaved woman by actor Marissa Kennedy.

Sites and Museums Reach the Public Through Virtual Programming During Pandemic

Virtual day camps, online education, YouTube tours, interactive lectures on Zoom, downloadable games and activities: these are some of the many ways PHMC's sites and museums continued their mission to share Pennsylvania history with the public during the COVID-19 crisis. When staff began teleworking in March 2020, they quickly devised ways to continue serving their audiences, first offering digital content they had available via their websites and social media. Videos of previous programs and lectures were offered online. Existing virtual tours of museums or collections pieces were shared. By May, when it became clear that summer events would be canceled, sites began producing new digital programs to reach existing and new audiences. By June, there were enough offerings to warrant a program calendar. Attendance for these online programs often equaled or exceeded those for in-person lectures, given that geography was no barrier to attendance. Staff also made good use of collections objects and images to create new content to share with audiences on websites and social media, and curators have added thousands of entries to PHMC's online collections portal for public access.

State Historic Preservation Office

The Pennsylvania State Historic Preservation Office (PA SHPO) supports efforts across the commonwealth to incorporate history in the planning and development of vibrant, sustainable, forward-thinking communities. PA SHPO's preservation and heritage initiatives include supervision of planning and construction grants for the continued use of historic buildings, the management of state and federal tax credit programs for the rehabilitation of historic properties, the maintenance of a publicly searchable database of historic resources, and the administration of the Pennsylvania Historical Marker and National Register of Historic Places programs. Under the National Historic Preservation Act and the Pennsylvania History Code, PA SHPO partners with state agencies, developers, local governments and citizens to review thousands of state and federal projects annually, ensuring that significant historic and archaeological resources are incorporated within project planning.

Proactive Program Encourages Marker Nominations for Underrepresented Subjects

In recent years, archaeological investigations have uncovered the remains of Pandenarium, an agricultural community of formerly enslaved African Americans that flourished from the 1850s through the 1930s, north of Indian Run in Mercer County. Many of the original inhabitants worked to purchase the liberty of others. It is a story of hard-fought freedom, collaboration and perseverance. This past year, Pandenarium was the subject of one of the Pennsylvania Historical Markers dedicated and installed through the Proactive Marker Initiative. In 2018 PA SHPO began the effort working with partners across the commonwealth to encourage nominations for underrepresented subjects to commemorate a broader history of Pennsylvania, its places, and its people of all races, religions, genders and sexual orientations. PHMC provides the financial support to create and install these markers. The subjects of the proactive markers approved in 2020 include Gloria Casarez, Latina LGBTQ activist, in Philadelphia; Frances Dorrance, one of Pennsylvania's most influential archaeologists, in Wilkes-Barre, Luzerne County; Fighter's Heaven, the training camp of Muhammad Ali, near Orwigsburg, Schuylkill County; and Parker's Landing Petroglyphs, Native American engravings on rocks, in Clarion County.

CLG Program Offers New Benefit to Assist Communities in Historic Preservation

The Thomas F. Donatucci Sr. Library (formerly the Passyunk Library) opened in 1914 and is one of 25 branches of the Free Library of Philadelphia built with funds donated by philanthropist Andrew Carnegie. It was designed by Philadelphia architect John T. Windrim in the Beaux Arts form with Classical Revival detailing. In 2019 the library became the first recipient of the Designing for Preservation Solutions (DPS) benefit, one of the new assets in PA SHPO's rebooted Certified Local Government (CLG) program. The goal of the CLG program is preservation through partnership in which local, state and federal governments work together to help communities save the character of their historic and older places. The new DPS benefit provides CLGs and their partners with pro bono design assistance from PA SHPO staff on preservation-related projects. The Donatucci Library had not been accessible to patrons with mobility issues and sought assistance through the CLG program. PA SHPO identified and evaluated various options for improving the physical accessibility of the public spaces within the library with a report that included plans and a narrative evaluation of the degree to which each option meets the project's goals.

Community Initiative Awards Honor Preservation Successes

PA SHPO's innovative statewide historic preservation plan, #PreservationHappensHere, is grounded in the idea that great preservation activities are happening every day across Pennsylvania but often go unnoticed. To broaden the understanding of historic preservation and encourage communities to promote it, PA SHPO established the annual Community Initiative Awards to recognize organizations, municipalities, agencies and individuals who have worked hard to achieve preservation successes. This year's four recipients have demonstrated the value of preserving iconic places and community landmarks through their ownership and stewardship. The honorees were Lazaretto, the site of the first quarantine hospital in the Western Hemisphere, repurposed for municipal use, in Tincum Township, Delaware County; the Mahoning Drive-In Theater, restored for classic screenings, in Lehighton, Carbon County; Roxian Theatre, rehabilitated as a public entertainment venue, in McKees Rocks, Allegheny County; and Fighter's Heaven, the training camp of heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali, recently restored as a historic site, near Orwigsburg, Schuylkill County.

Historical Documents Accessible to the Public Through Digitization Project

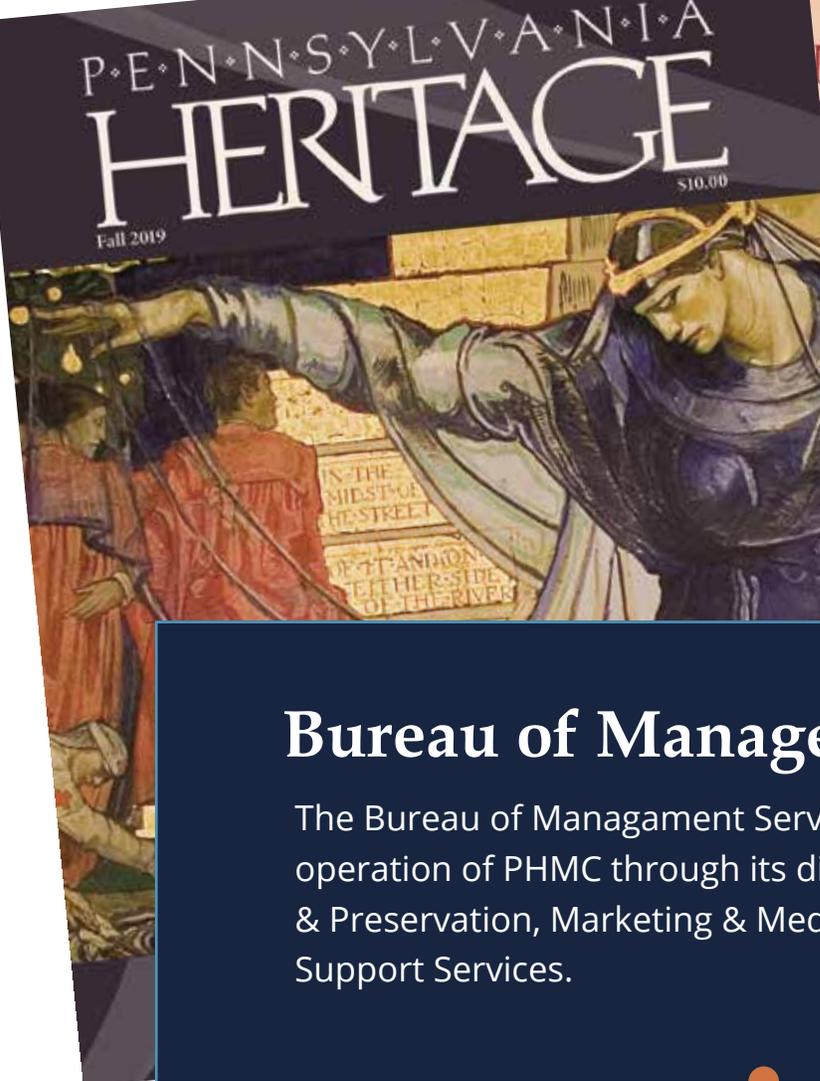

Access to information via the internet became even more crucial toward the end of this fiscal year because of the COVID-19 pandemic. As part of PHMC's ongoing effort to make Pennsylvania history more widely available to the public, PA SHPO completed a three-year project to turn its CD and paper files into digital documents as part of the office's development of a new online system. The project, which began in Fall 2017, involved a gap analysis, the preparation and scanning of documents, and filing for all 67 Pennsylvania counties. More than 1 million pages of reports and HRSF (Historic Resource Survey Form) and PASS (Pennsylvania Archaeological Site Survey) documents are now available to the public online.

PA SHPO Programs Connect Communities to Their History Across PA

Through its many historic preservation programs, PA SHPO engages with state and federal agencies, local governments, communities, organizations and individuals to identify, promote and protect Pennsylvania's architectural and archaeological resources. PA SHPO's community engagement stretches from its main office in Harrisburg, its two regional offices in Pittsburgh and Fort Washington, and, especially significant in 2020 with the outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic, to the cloud. This map reflects some of the ways in which PA SHPO served people, places and communities throughout the commonwealth in 2019-20, both in person and online.

Bureau of Management Services

The Bureau of Management Services supports the overall operation of PHMC through its divisions of Architecture & Preservation, Marketing & Media, and Fiscal & Office Support Services.

The Division of Architecture & Preservation (DAP) manages facility planning, architectural and engineering design, and construction projects for all PHMC facilities. Projects in the last year included restoration of the exteriors of 23 buildings at Pennsbury Manor, completion of the design and commencement of construction for a sitewide restoration project at Old Economy Village, replacement of escalators at The State Museum, and completion of site preparation and start of construction for the new State Archives. DAP managed approximately $4 million in Keystone Recreation, Park & Conservation Fund-supported projects at PHMC historic sites and museums in 2019-20.

The Division of Marketing & Media supports the agency through media relations, graphic design, photography, web administration, social media, and the publication of PHMC's quarterly history magazine, Pennsylvania Heritage. Through social media this year, PHMC programs reached 84,714 followers on Facebook and 6,042 on Twitter. In April 2020 Pennsylvania Heritage—now in its 46th year in print—launched paheritagemagazine.com, an online archive of issues published since the magazine premiered in December 1974.

The Division of Fiscal & Office Support Services provides budget, purchasing, human resource, and other management services for PHMC.
